Eric Fuller

Saxophone, Flute,
Jazz Theory

Eric enjoys reading, exercise and playing computer games.

Eric is an accomplished jazz musician and instructor specializing in jazz improvisation and jazz theory. He teaches students from age eight to adults and all skill levels. His approach to teaching has evolved since he began teaching saxophone at La Jolla Music in 2006, and involves a strong foundation in technique, reading skills, and emphasis on good tone production.

Eric began playing saxophone at age ten, but developed a real attraction to jazz at age sixteen. While in high school Eric studied with Joe Marillo, Bob Magnusson, and Casey Persch. From 2002-2006, Eric attended Berklee College of Music in Boston, Massachusetts, pursuing a degree in Professional Music with an emphasis on Jazz Performance. While at Berklee, Eric received instruction from George Garzone, Frank Tiberi, Dave Santoro, Bill Pierce, and Ken Cervenka. Eric was selected to perform in various prestigious ensembles at Berklee, including the Miles Davis, Cedar Walton, and the Charlie Parker ensembles.
